

KILGANNON'S ALMANAC FOR NORTH CONNAUGHT 1906

Volume 1. Alphabetical Directory of Sligo and Sligo Business Directory

Until my cousin Sean Foley trustingly let me borrow his rare copy of Kilgannon's 1906 Almanac for North Connaught I had not known of its existence. It is yet another example of Thady Kilgannon's many enterprises. Thaddeus, Thady or Tadhg Kilgannon, born 1862, was indeed an enterprising man for not only was he a well-known Sligo photographer with a studio at 1 Thomas Street which he established in 1884, he was also a printer, publisher of local postcards and a short-lived local advertising newspaper, The Sligo Advertiser, 1890-1893, followed by The Sligo Star, which also had a short life and first appeared in 1899*; in the 1920s he was the owner of Sligo's first cinema or picture house, The Picture Theatre in Thomas Street, and later The Pavilion also in Thomas Street; in 1926 he published a history of the town "Sligo and its surroundings: a descriptive and pictorial guide to the history, scenery, antiquities, and place of interest in and around Sligo." He was also a patron of the Arts and in the 1920s he regularly allowed the Sligo Choral and Operatic Society to use The Pavilion for their performances.

When Sean's battered and dog-eared pocket-size 7 ¼" x 5" paperback arrived, minus its front cover and the first ten pages, I was struck by what a treasure trove it would be for anyone interested in family and local history. Kilgannon's 1906 Almanac contains a month by month calendar of historical events, times of courts sittings, train timetables, a list of fairs in North Connaught, advice for farmers, contributions on local subjects including a fascinating history of Sligo Harbour from 1881 to 1906, histories of the places of worship in the town, detailed information on the town's clubs and societies, schools, the Military Barracks, poetry, full page advertisements showing shop fronts in the town as they were one hundred and seven years ago and most importantly a directory of inhabitants and businesses in Sligo town and county. In scanning the 180 page book I decided because of its size to split it into two PDFs the first dealing with Sligo Town and the second with Sligo County. Because some of the Sligo streets given in the directory have disappeared, e.g. Charlotte Street, or their names have been changed over the years, Pound Street now Connolly Street, I have included an 1888 map from O'Rourke's History of Sligo which might be of some help to those who are not familiar with those changes.

Kilgannon's Almanac is a wonderful source of social and political history of that period. Ireland was still an integral part the United Kingdom with allegiance to the Crown and a Lord Lieutenant deputizing in Dublin Castle; law and order was kept by the Royal Irish Constabulary – the R.I.C. and there was still a British Military Barracks in Barrack Street. The Boer War had ended just a few years before; the First World War was eight years in the future with many Irish men fighting and dying under the British Flag in both conflicts. The Easter Uprising was another ten years away when Irish men would fight and die under their own flag. Feis Shligigh had been founded three years earlier under the auspices of the Sligo Branch of the Gaelic League to promote the Irish language and culture. A car driver was someone who drove a horse-drawn vehicle but it would not be long before a car driver was someone who drove a motor car. There were cars about because James Perry of Knox's Street – O'Connell Street – advertises Motors and all classes of Accessories and Repairs. Telephones were not yet the norm and businesses had a telegram address. Many names of Sligo families and businesses appear which were still familiar fifty years later and are still familiar yet another fifty or more year later. In the Town Hall in 1906 Nationalists were in a majority on Sligo County Council but as is normal in politics different rules appear to operate once people are in power. Tadgh Kilgannon had the last word when he reproduced a newspaper report SCENES IN SLIGO on the last page of his almanac on the goings on at a council meeting to decide on who should get the Co. Council printing contract. Despite Tadgh Kilgannon's tender being the cheapest the contract went to a certain Mrs P.A. McHugh. Mr Kilgannon, was threatened by a County Councillor with being thrown down the stairs if he opened his mouth while they were giving the contract to Mrs McHugh.

Thanks to our new digital age and to the generosity of Sean Foley this piece of Sligo's heritage can be shared with a wider readership. Once again we can read it in our own homes. Tadgh Kilgannon I am sure would have approved. One wonders what other gems of Sligo's past are gathering dust in people's cupboards and drawers somewhere. Hopefully we will be able to find out more about this enterprising Sligo man's life when more 20th century newspapers become digitally available online.

A few years ago Roly Sleater of Treacy Avenue was out walking at Finisklin found and about 2000 old glass negative plates from Kilgannon Studios dumped in The Marshes - the old Sligo dump. Mr Sleater had the presence of mind to recognise their historical value and brought them home carrying as many as he could at one time over many days. When Roly died his sister Miss Ivy Sleater from England had to deal with disposing his effects selling his house and clearing the contents among which she found the glass plates. She placed an advert for them in the Sligo Champion which fortunately was seen by Alec Foley, a Sligo Photographer and after meeting him Miss Sleater decided she would donate the collection to him. In order to scan the glass plate negatives, mainly portraits, and make positive images of them Alec needed to buy a special scanner. In 2012 with a grant of £500 from Sligo County Council Heritage Officer Alec was able to buy a suitable scanner for €750. He spent many hours scanning the glass plate negatives and eventually put all the images on YouTube and Vimeo.com so that they could be freely viewed by anyone. They can easily be found by googling Tadgh Kilgannon. Alec has also deposited a DVD of them with Sligo County Library. Alec, who is descended from Foleys the Brewery family, said the whole exercise had been a labour of love. Tadgh Kilgannon's photos are now there for future generations. Despite taking thousands of photos of others in his lifetime I have not yet seen one of Tadgh Kilgannon.

BARONY OF CARBURY.

The Barony of Carbury, in which the town of Sligo is situated, we shall take first. It takes its name from Cairbre, the third of the eight sons of Niall of the Nine Hostages, four of whom settled in the south, their descendants being called the Southern Hy-Nialls, and the other four in the Northern districts, being called the Northern Hy-Nialls. Cairbre settled in the district to which he gave his name, and was the ancestor of the Cinel-Carbery. As early as A.D. 4694 mention is made of Carbury, the occasion being the death of Melge Molbthach, King of Ireland, who was killed in battle. It is again referred to in the Four Masters, A.D. 766, in recording the death of Cathal, Lord of Carbury. Cairbre's descendants ruled this district for several centuries, furnishing one monarch of Ireland, Tuathal Maelgarb, grandson of Cairbre, the descendants of the other brother furnishing no less than 45 kings of Ireland. It was not until the 12th century that the O'Connors settled in Carbury. They then ruled the district until defeated by the Cenil-Connell, or Northmen, at the battle of Crich-Cairbre, after which the latter held sway for about two centuries. In the middle of the 14th century, however, the O'Connors again became paramount, and succeeded in subjecting Tyrconnell for a time.

The barony extends along the coast line from Ballysadare Bay to the borders of the County Leitrim. It contains 76,357 acres 3 roods and 14 perches, and is divided into seven parishes—Ahamlish, Calry, Drumcliffe, Killaspugbrone, Kilmacowen, Rossinver, and St. John's.

BOROUGH OF SLIGO.

The town of Sligo is situated partly in the parish of St. John's and partly in Calry, and for this reason we have, in dealing with it here, to depart somewhat from the general plan as regards the arrangement of parishes. We shall, however, deal with both later on. Although Sligo is not so ancient as many suppose, it can boast of a fairly respectable antiquity. The first appearance of a town appeared in the thirteenth century, when Maurice Fitzgerald built the castle of Sligo. It is, therefore, clear that the town is of English origin, as the people who accompanied Fitzgerald were of course English, and it is extremely improbable that the native Irish would settle down to the building of a town in the vicinity of their enemies' castle; while, on the other hand, the people of English descent should for safety, if for no other reason, settle close to their stronghold. As already recorded, the town of Sligo had for centuries a rather chequered and stormy history, being burned and pillaged several times, and changing owners as frequently. In 1611 great trepidation existed in governmental quarters regarding the members who were to compose the new Parliament then about to sit in Dublin, and in the making of boroughs only those were created which would "certainly return Protestants," and some hesitation appears to have existed in regard to Sligo. It was, however, erected into a borough in 1612, in the reign of James I., though the Deed of Incorporation was not perfected until the following year. The following was the Constitution:—

"A Portreeve and twelve free Burgesses and Commonalty. The Portreeve and burgesses to return two members to Parliament. The Portreeve to be chosen on the 24th June, and sworn before his predecessor on the 29th September of every year. Upon any vacancy within the year, a Portreeve to be chosen within fifteen days, and a Burgess within seven days, to supply such vacancy. On every Tuesday a Court of Record was to be held with power to determine all actions for debt, &c., not exceeding five marks. They could assemble to make bye-laws, had a mercatory guild, and a common seal; could have two sergeants at mace and other inferior officers, to be appointed during good behaviour or pleasure. The Portreeve to be Clerk of Market." In 1621 "was further granted a Charter of Incorporation of a Mayor, two constables and merchants of the staple."

O'CONNELL STRETF (OR KNOX'S STREET), SLIGO.

In 1687 the Charter was dissolved by James II. and a new Charter substituted, but on the overthrow of James the original Charter was revived.

Previous to the passing of the Act of Union the borough returned two members to Parliament, and was known as one of the "pocket boroughs." It consisted of twelve burgesses elected for life, who appointed a provost each year. Those burgesses on the death or retirement of a member had the power of electing his successor. When a clique or family party once got supremacy, they could always continue to maintain it by electing members or connections of their own families when the vacancies occurred. Thus the Corporation might be regarded as the absolute property of the family in power, for the Parliamentary representation might be disposed of to the highest bidder. After the passing of the Union the representation was reduced to one member—Mr. Wynne, who was the patron, receiving compensation for his loss—but the mode of election remained the same.

Some of the records of the Corporation are missing, as the first entry to be found in the books in the Town Hall is dated April 21st, 1709. These books are in no way interesting, as they contain merely records of elections and bald entries regarding criminal sentences. The election, municipal and parliamentary, were always disposed of in an off-hand manner by three or four burgesses according as the Wynne family pleased. In 1711 Captain Owen Wynne was elected a Burgess. Some time afterwards other members and connections of the Wynne family obtained seats, and in a short time they found themselves in a position to assume the control of the Corporation. The names of all the county families figure as burgesses, at one time or another, in these old documents, with the exception of the O'Haras.

Regarding the markets very little appears to have been done, the only entries being in 1711 and 1800, when the Corporation adjusted the weights and measures of turf, hay, and straw. "In 1711 the Council imposed a quarterage, that is, a tax of 6d. a quarter on all Catholic inhabitants exercising trades, art, or mastery, and others, or persons engaged in other occupation, those refusing payment to have their shops shut, and to be debarred from trade or occupation in the borough. This infamous exaction resembles that wrung from the Jews in some countries for leave to live in them." A second Act of Parliament was passed in 1803 amending the provisions of the former, and creating a new body—24 Commissioners, elected for life by £20 householders—whose functions were to look after the interests of the town and harbour. In a short time the new Commissioners were as much under the control of Mr. Wynne as the members of the old Corporation. The system in vogue about 1834 has been described as follows:—"The entire number of Commissioners was 40. Mr. Wynne (represented by the provost) and his 12 burgesses made up 13 of these; the member for the borough and the two county members—of the latter one was his son-in-law, the other being a freeman—increased his number to 16; the inhabitants of the town elected 24 by ballot. In course of time, however, many of the original Commissioners having died or resigned, Mr. Wynne, from his large property and influence, succeeded in filling several of those vacancies; thus the corporators obtained a majority out of the 24 members elected under the Sligo Act, though, if Mr. Wynne had induced only five of them to join those already enumerated, it would have sufficed to give him a preponderating influence."

In regard to the Parliamentary representation of the borough, the first quarter of the century was uneventful, but in 1828 an agitation was set on foot for reforming the old Corporation, and the Bill was carried in 1832, the number of voters on the new register being 418. This Act considerably enlarged the electorate, and took the power of electing Parliamentary representatives out of the hands of Mr. Wynne. In the same year Mr. John Martin contested the seat with Mr. Wynne. O'Connell espoused the side of Martin, who was returned by 213 votes, as against 158 for Mr. Wynne. This was the first occasion, since 1722, on which the power was taken out of the hands of the Wynne family. In 1837 John Patrick Somers contested the representation, and, being returned by 262 votes to 208 recorded for Martin, he held the seat until the election of 1847. He was again returned that year, but a petition was lodged against him, and he was unseated. A new election was ordered, and this time his opponent was a Mr. Charles Townley, from Lancashire. Money was freely distributed in buying votes, and as Townley had the money bags he was declared elected by a majority of seven votes, but was again unseated on petition. Somers was returned at the new election by a substantial majority, his opponent this time being a Mr. Hartley. Again in 1852 the fight was renewed between Somers and Townley, when the polling was declared as 147 for Townley and 108 for Somers, but on this occasion also Townley was unseated on petition for corrupt practices, and so he retired to Townley Hall, minus a heavy purse, a sadder and wiser man. Next came on the scene the notorious Sadleir party for the new election. Sadleir at the time appears to have had a heavy purse, too, for he was returned at the head of the poll by 152 votes to 142 recorded for Somers, and, though the latter again petitioned. Sadleir was allowed to retain the seat. On Sadleir's suicide another election came off in 1855, Somers polling 150 and Mr. Wynne 144 votes. The latter, however, petitioned, and was awarded the seat. Again in 1859 Wynne was returned by 177 votes to 73 cast for Somers. In the following year Wynne resigned his seat, and Counsellor MacDonogh came upon the scene. He polled 157 votes, while there were only 2 recorded for Somers. Somers at this time had fallen into disrepute with the Sligo electors owing to some political peccadilloes which were alleged against him, and furthermore his money had been all previously spent. In 1855 MacDonogh was unsuccessful, having polled only 158 against 168 for Armstrong. It is said that MacDonogh's election expenses cost him upwards of £13,000, while Sergeant Armstrong's expenditure was also lavish.

Three years subsequently Parliament was dissolved, and this election—1868—was contested in the usual style by Flanagan and Knox. Party feeling ran unusually high, and though 340 police, 20 mounted men, two troops of cavalry, and three companies of infantry were drafted into the town, the force was entirely insufficient to cope with the violence of the mobs. It was at this contest that Captain King lost his life, having accidentally pulled the trigger of his revolver as he was jostling his way through the crowd, and shot himself dead. Knox was declared elected by 241 votes against 229 for Flanagan. So great was the damage done during the contest that £1,300 was voted for malicious injuries by the Grand Jury at the following assizes. As usual, a petition was lodged, and Major Knox was unseated on the ground of bribery and corruption by himself and his agents. Judge Keogh, before whom the case was tried, reported the matter before the House of Commons, when a Commission was appointed. They commenced to hear evidence in the Sligo Court-house on the 5th October, 1869, and continued until December, the result of their report being that the borough was disfranchised. "A number of Queen's Counsel, barristers, justices of the peace, gentlemen, merchants, and persons holding official appointments were, on their names being scheduled, in the reports of the Judge and Commissioners, subjected to the penalties, disqualifications, and deprivations enumerated in the Corrupt Practices Act."

A common seal was prescribed in the Charter, the device adopted being a tower in ruins, with a tall tree adjoining, and a hare running across a strand, one of its hind feet being caught by an oyster. It was generally supposed that the tower in the device had reference to the tower of Drumcliffe until Dr. O'Rourke came forward with another theory—a theory borne out by some documentary evidence. The tower in the original seal is square, not round like Drumcliffe, a fact which itself goes some way to show that the tower of the Abbey was the structure represented. Then he shows from a letter written in 1772 by Sir Francis Leycester, when retiring from the Corporation, that the town was referred to as "the Abbey-ville of Sligo" (the town of the Abbey of Sligo). As far back as 1612, in an inquisition taken at Rosslea, Sligo is called "the Abbey town of Sligo." Sir Francis Leycester, it should be remembered, ought to be an authority, as he was the owner of the tolls and customs of Sligo, as well as of the lands on which the Abbey stood, having inherited them from his ancestor, Sir Robert Leycester, who received a grant of the property from James I.

The insignia of the Corporation are two silver maces, "the gift of Samuel Walton, Alderman, one of the representatives of the burrough of Sligo, anno domini, 1703." The second, the Mayor's chain, was presented during his first term of office as mayor in 1882 by Alderman Coltery, each of the surviving mayors that preceded him, however, contributing a link to commemorate his year of office. Nearly all the mayors who have since occupied this exalted position have also contributed a link each, so that the chain is now becoming rather unwieldy.

Sligo is 137 miles N.W. from Dublin, and comprises an area of 3,001 acres, of which 407 are in the town, and 2,594 in the rural district. Population in 1861, 10,693; in 1871, 10,670; in 1881, 10,808; in 1891, 10,274; in 1901, 10,870; houses, 1,902.

It is situate near the mouth of the Garavogue, which is crossed by two bridges, and discharges itself into Sligo Bay. The public buildings are—The Ulster Bank, the Provincial Bank, the Bank of Ireland, the Belfast Bank, the Hibernian Bank, a Masonic Lodge, a Model National School, all handsome edifices; two Churches, a fine Roman Catholic Cathedral, one Friary or Abbey Church, Presbyterian Church, Independent, and two Methodist Churches; the County Court-house, a new and beautiful structure, Prison, Infirmary, and Fever Hospital, the Union Workhouse, and a Lunatic Asylum, the latter standing on a prominent position outside the town, and Town Hall erected in 1865-6.

Markets on Tuesday and Saturday, and a pork and fowl market on Friday in each week. Fairs on 27th March, 1st Saturday in May, 4th July, 11th August, 9th October, and also on first Tuesday in other months.

COUNTY OF SLIGO.

The County of Sligo is bounded on the North by the Atlantic Ocean; E., Leitrim; S., Roscommon and Mayo; W., Mayo. Greatest length: N. and S., 38 miles; greatest breadth, E. and W., 41 miles; comprising an area of 452,356 acres, of which 74,508 are under tillage, 237,536 in pasture, 7,678 in plantations, 120,819 waste, bog, mountain, &c.; and 11,815 under water. The coast is indented by Sligo and Killala Bays. Near it are the islets of Innismurry, Oyster, and Coney. The surface has much mountain and much level ground. The soil, in many parts, is a light sandy loam; in others it is deep and rich; many patches of bog are interspersed. The subsoil in the level country is limestone. The Moy forms part of the W. boundary of the county. The foughs are—Gill, Arrow, Gara, Talt, Easky, and several smaller. The occupations are agricultural; coarse woollens and linens are manufactured.

Originally—about the 13th century—the Province was divided into two counties, the county of Connaught and the county of Roscommon, the former comprising the present counties of Clare, Galway, and Mayo, and the latter the present counties of Roscommon, Leitrim, Cavan, and Sligo, with the portion of Donegal between the Drowes and the Erne. In the 16th century the Province was divided into counties as they now exist. At the time of the formation of the County Sligo the northern boundary was the river Erne, but subsequently a memorial was presented to the Government applying as follows:—"For a grant of that small part of the County of Sligo which lies between the end of Lough Erne and the sea, as they intend to have a market town on the south side at Ballike, and from thence three miles nearer the sea to erect a strong corporation; this part of Sligo contains about three miles, being a piece very convenient adjoining the sea for the necessary use of the inhabitants of that corporation for bringing in or transporting their commodities." The boundary of the county was changed, the County of Leitrim getting the narrow strip of seaboard which now appears on the map.

The county is divided into 6 baronies, and contains 37 parishes, 1,260 townlands, having a population in 1901 of 84,083; males, 41,849; females, 42,234 (Roman Catholics, 76,146; Protestant Episcopalians, 6,415; Presbyterians, 662; Methodists, 518; others, 342), or 17,167 families, inhabiting 17,049 houses; also 816 uninhabited, and 19 building. It is in the baronies of Achonry and Elphin, with portions in Killala and Ardagh. The county town of Sligo has 10,870 inhabitants; Ballymote, 997; and Tobercurry, 871.

The county returns 2 members to Parliament. Registered Electors, 1903—North Division, 8,446; South Division, 7,505; with 17 polling places. It is in the Connaught Circuit. The Assizes are held at Sligo, and Quarter Sessions at Ballymote, Easky, and Sligo. There are 14 Petty Sessions Districts within the county, and portions of 3 others. Three Poor Law Unions—Dromore West, Sligo, and Tobercurry—are wholly within the county, and parts of the Unions of Ballina and Boyle. The Constabulary force consists of 229 men. The county is within the Dublin military district; and, in conjunction with the cos. Galway, Leitrim, Mayo, and Roscommon, forms No. 68 Sub-district, the Brigade Depot of which is at Galway.

SLIGO HARBOUR.

The first reference we find to the Harbour of Sligo is in the reign of Henry VI., when—"It was agreed by James, Count of Ormond, that William De Burge, Knight, and his brother should have payment for their services in the Irish wars out of the customs of the ports of Sligo and Galway. The Sligo Harbour was always looked upon as being very important, for as early as 1553 Sligo is referred to in a State paper as the best harbour town in all the country." It would seem that O'Connor Sligo was exercising ownership over the harbour at this period, for the State paper adds—"And the same O'Connor and certain of his predecessors keepeth the same by usurpation." O'Donnell was also interested in it, for we found him making over to Henry VIII. "the moiety of the cocket of all ships coming to Sligoghe to trade, from which I have had cocket; so that the King's bailiff or servant, called a marshall, accompanied by my bailiff, shall in like manner exact the tribute. . . . If a multitude of herrings and other fish, called 'Carbusle,' should resort to the country of Lord O'Donnell, or to his sea, one half thereof shall belong to the King, and the other half to O'Donnell." At this period, it should be mentioned, Sligo was much frequented by trading and fishing vessels from Spain. In 1606 the fishing was leased by the King to Sir Henry Ffolliott.

In 1729 an Act of Parliament was passed for improving the channel, and in 1765, a grant being made by Parliament, a pier, 160 feet long, was erected at Oyster Island, but being neglected a trace of it is hardly visible at the present time.

The first appearance of a quay at Sligo was at the time of the erection of the Custom House and Stores, when the portion adjoining was constructed. Martin's Quay, which is private property, was erected by Mr. Charles Martin. The next portion was constructed by Mr. James Cochrane, who charged dues, but he afterwards disposed of the property to the Harbour Commissioners. Next was erected the Ballast Quay, which takes its name from the old ballast bank, and which now extends to about a length of 2,000 feet. Lower down is the New Quay, which can accommodate vessels with a cargo of 5,000 or 6,000 tons.

From 1804 until the middle of the century there was considerable emigration to America from this port. In 1825 Mr. Patrick O'Connor fitted out, on her return voyage, a vessel called the "Belsay Castle," which came from America with flax seed, for emigrants, who were landed at Newfoundland. Among those who sailed in the "Belsay Castle" were 70 passengers sent out by the famous Thady Connellan, the money having been collected by him for the purpose in England. Connellan, owing to the number he was sending, got special terms at 30s. a head, although to others the cost was £2. Emigrants in these times had to supply themselves during the voyage with provisions, which usually consisted of a bag of potatoes and some salt herrings for each passenger. In 1830 Mr. O'Connor sent out a vessel of his own, the "Argo," which carried out 156 passengers, though her tonnage did not exceed 164 tons, Mr. Peter O'Connor making the voyage on the occasion to see that the emigrants were properly treated.

On the abolition of the Corn Laws, in 1846, vessels came more frequently to the port, and on their return voyage brought out passengers.

After the passing of the Borough Improvement Act of '69 a new body of Commissioners was created. The number of members now composing the body is 19—eight selected by traders paying harbour dues to the amount of £5, each trader having an extra vote for every additional £10, the maximum being six votes; eight selected by householders rated at £12; two nominated by the Corporation, the Mayor being an ex-officio member during his year of office. The Commissioners, as pointed out elsewhere, were, before the Act of '69, elected for life, but now the term of office is limited to four years.

In 1877 the "Sligo Harbour Act," promoted by the Commissioners, was passed, and its provisions permitted the Commissioners to borrow, for the purposes of improvement to the extent of £56,000. By the deepening of the channel and the construction of the deep-water berths, for which loans to amount were procured, vessels drawing up to 18 feet can be accommodated at low water; while large steamers, drawing as much as 21 feet, and carrying from 5,000 to 6,000 tons, can now come up the channel in safety. Vessels of larger draught may be moored at Rosses Point, by means of the mooring buoys which the Commissioners have provided there, until lightened of portion of their cargoes, when they can come up and discharge the remainder at the quays.

Some idea may be gained of the progress which has been, and is being made, by a glance at the following figures, which show that the annual revenue of the Harbour has been nearly trebled within the past thirty years. In comparing the number of vessels, it should be borne in mind that one of the large steamers, which are now being accommodated at the New Quay, carries as much cargo as eight of the small vessels which formerly came to Sligo.

Number and Tonnage of Vessels, and Dues received for the Years 1874, 1884, 1894, and 1904.

Year	No. of Vessels	Tonnage	Dues Received				Total
			Harbour	Import	Export
1874	412	63,963	£1 418 2 9	£1149 7 2	£789 19 2		£3,337 9 1
1884	498	80,183	2,131 11 5	1710 13 0	634 5 6		4,476 12 11
1894	359	82,270	2,417 19 7	3250 12 10	773 13 9		6,442 9 2
1904	544	97,533	3188 7 6	4136 4 2	635 1 1		7,959 12 9

The facilities afforded by the new Tramway, constructed from the Railway Goods Store to the Deep-water Berths, enable by bringing the railway waggons alongside the steamer's side while discharging, the local merchants to economise a considerable amount of expense, which puts them in a position to compete successfully over a larger area with rivals from the other large ports, a circumstance which means that the trade of Sligo, if not increased, will be at least maintained.

Although the Commissioners, by a Provisional Order in 1903, obtained an extension of their borrowing powers by £100,000, bringing their limit up to £155,000, they have abstained up to the present from taking advantage of the concession, their indebtedness being now, as before, only £56,000.

A circumstance which should be borne in mind is the fact that Sligo is one of the few places that never received anything from the Government in the shape of grants; the vast progress which has been made in developing and extending the Harbour being, therefore, all the more creditable to the zeal and energy of the Commissioners.

SLIGO FISHERY.

Sligo has been noted for its valuable fisheries from time immemorial. So abundant were shell fish of all kinds that the town derives its name from the circumstances—Slig, a shell. Banks of oyster deposit three or four feet deep are to be found at the lower Rosses. In 1779 the writers of a "Tour in Connaught" affirm that oysters were so plentiful "they are got by cars full, only paying the carriage." In our own days the oyster beds about Sligo are not so prolific, and, although they yield the finest quality, they are not worked as energetically as they might be by the owners.

But the most remarkable is the Salmon Fishery, the fish being in season all the year round, a fact which, up to the present, naturalists have been unable to account for. The late Mr. Petrie, then lessee of the fishery, having proved the matter to the satisfaction of the Fishery Inspectors, obtained the unusual privilege of opening the fishery on 1st January, though in most other places the season does not open until the 4th February. It certainly is inexplicable the difference between the salmon of Sligo and Ballisodare rivers, though in such close proximity and emptying their waters, as they do, into the same channel. People being unable to account for the singular properties of the Sligo salmon by natural causes, have ascribed the reason to the blessing bestowed on the river by St. Patrick, as recorded in Colgan's Tripartite Life of the Saint:—"Then Patrick told the fishermen to cast their nets for him into the river, namely, into Sligeach. They said to him, 'Salmon are not caught in it, in this river, in winter, but since thou sayest it,' say the fishermen, 'we will do it.' They cast their nets and caught great salmon, and gave them to Patrick. And he blessed the river, so that the Sligeach is the milch-cow of the waters of Ireland, for in it fish are caught in every quarter of the year."

The Herring Fishery, although it has, comparatively speaking, fallen into desuetude, was at one time a very profitable industry, attracting fishermen from the Continent, notably from Spain. There is still an occasional good season, and it is needless to say that the hardy and industrious fishermen of the district always take advantage of it, when it comes, to the fullest extent. In addition to salmon, oysters, and herring, the Sligo waters are equally prolific in turbot, cod, lobsters, mackerel, and whiting.

MARKETS AND FAIRS.

The weekly markets of Sligo are now in existence close on three centuries. A grant was made to Sir James Fullerton on the 25th June, 1694, permitting him to hold a market in Sligo on every Saturday, and also to hold two fairs every year on the 24th June and 29th September. And on the 5th March, 1697, a further grant was made to Sir James Craige to hold another market on every Tuesday, and two additional fairs on the 17th March and 1st August. These privileges were afterwards confirmed to William, Earl of Stafford, and Thomas Radcliffe.

In 1885 the Fairs and Markets were acquired by the Corporation by virtue of the Sligo Borough Improvement Act of 1869 from Mr. Wynne, who then enjoyed the rights, the purchase money being £6,500. Since then many improvements have been effected in the management of the markets, though they are rather a white elephant to the Corporation instead of being the source of any pecuniary benefit.

A yearly Horse Fair was established in May, 1890, and in the following September weekly markets were started for pigs on Thursday, and for fowl on Friday.

The Butter-making Industry used to be very considerable in this district for over a century. It would seem, however, that as far back as 20 years ago Sligo butter began to lose its popularity in the English and Scotch markets, the Danes having superseded us to a considerable extent. This was said to be owing to the system of packing. The subject was before the Corporation in 1894, and a committee was appointed to inquire into the matter. They recommended in their report the introduction of smaller kits or firkins, stating also that the sooner butter could be sold the better the quality would be, this being specially the case with reference to butter made during the winter months, when cattle are housed. The recommendation does not seem, however, to have any effect on the farmers, as they still continued to pack on the same old system, until the reputation of the Sligo brand passed from bad to worse. It is not surprising, then, that when the creamery movement started here some ten years ago the farmers in almost every district of the county, except Tireragh, adopted the creamery system. And thus the Butter Market, which used to be a hive of industry on every market day, is now practically a howling wilderness, and the coopers of the town who, half a century ago, when Sligo meat and Sligo butter were packed for exportation, were numerically the strongest body of tradesmen in the town, are now, all that is left of them, practically idle with their occupation gone.

THE WATER WORKS.

The Water Works, one of the greatest boons ever conferred upon the town of Sligo, was long the subject of heated controversy. Whilst the scheme was in contemplation it had its advocates and opponents. Many of the ratepayers were reluctant to submit to further taxation, and were content to drink from the polluted wells with which the town was then supplied. Samples from all the wells were submitted to eminent analysts, and nearly the whole of them were pronounced unfit for use, some of them being contaminated by the sewerage "to such an extent that the constituents of the water were practically the same as you might expect to find in a graveyard."

At length the people were awakend to a sense of the danger of using such unhealthy supplies, and powers were got from Parliament through the Sligo Borough Improvement Act of '69 to borrow £25,000 to construct regular water-works. Then another controversy arose. Some were for taking the supply from Kilsellagh, while others were for taking it from the lake by means of a wind-mill and reservoir on Cairns Hill. At any rate, the scheme remained in abeyance until the statutory term had expired, and then it became necessary to apply to Parliament for a short Bill to revise the powers previously conferred. In 1881 tenders were taken for the contract, the sums being £14,000 for the construction of the reservoirs, &c., and £4,000 for the piping. The designing and engineering were conducted by Mr. Hassard, of London, the contractors being Messrs. Sweeney & M'Larnon, Mr. Creary, C.E., acting as clerk of works. The works were brought to completion in 1884, during the Mayoralty of Mr. Colliery. The reservoir is capable of containing 50,000,000 gallons of water, and it is confidently stated that the supply from the Kilsellagh source is sufficient for the needs of a population twice as large as that of Sligo.

The first water rate of 1s. in the £ was struck in 1882, but it was afterwards increased to 2s. A few years ago it was reduced to 1s. 9d., but in a short time it was advanced to the 2s rate, at which it stands at present.

SLIGO CEMETERY.

The site chosen for the new Cemetery is all that could be desired. It is one of the finest and most beautifully situated burial grounds in all Ireland. After the famine of 1846, and the pestilence which followed, the public were aroused to the danger arising from the overcrowded state of the burial grounds within the town—The Abbey and St. John's. The Corporation accordingly allocated a portion of "The Commons," giving in 1848, with the sanction of the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, a trust deed of the place to a Cemetery Committee. This Committee consisted of the clergy of all denominations in the town, and some of the principal laymen. Up to 1885 the Cemetery was managed by this Committee, but then the management was transferred to the Corporation, who, as Urban Sanitary Authority under the provisions of the Public Health (Ireland) Act of 1878, undertook the charge. The different religious denominations have separate portions allotted to them, the western side being used for Protestant and the eastern for Catholic interments. An excellent map of the cemetery has been recently prepared by Mr. Gilchrist, C.E., Sligo, which may be consulted at any time in the Town Clerk's Office.

SLIGO CATHEDRAL.

The Diocese of Elphin, of which Sligo is the Cathedral Parish, has been formed by the amalgamation of the three old dioceses of Ardarn, Drumcliffe, and Roscommon, the first prelate of the new Episcopal See being, it is believed, St. Asicus, who was consecrated bishop by St. Patrick. The festival of St. Asicus is celebrated on the 27th April, but the year of his death is not known. His incumbency is stated to be about 450.

The Cathedral, which owes its erection to the zeal and energy of the late Dr. Gillooley—the most distinguished prelate who has ruled the See since Asicus—stands on a rising ground towards the south-western portion of the town, and the style of the architecture has been described as “a kind of Romanesque combination of the Norman and Byzantine.” The building has a seating accommodation for over 4000 people seats being provided in the nave, aisles, transept, and galleries, to use the architectural terms, triferna. The sacred edifice was opened with great splendour and solemnity on the 16th July, 1875, by the late Cardinal Cullen.

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH.

Next to the Abbey in point of antiquarian interest comes St. John's Church. It has been generally considered that this structure of St. John's was erected between the middle of the 13th century and the year 1315, whilst the Anglo-Normans were in power in Sligo. St. John the Baptist appears to have been a favourite with them, as very many of their churches were named after him; and as the Celts would be unlikely to build a church under the patronage of their enemies' favourite Saint, antiquarians have inferred that St. John's was erected during the period immediately preceding the regime of the O'Conors. But Dr. O'Morke unearthed the will of Sir Roger Jones, the principal Anglo-Norman in Sligo in his day, and from this document it seems clear that the church was built by Sir Roger himself, for in his will he says—"My body I commit to the earth in my tomb in the chapel lately erected in the parish of St. John's, in Sligo"; and further he bequeathed the advowson, which he acquired by the erection, to his wife. The original building must, therefore, be regarded as a work of the 17th century instead of the 14th, as has been heretofore supposed.

In 1730 a new church was built on the site of the old one erected by Sir Roger Jones, from designs by a German architect named Castels. The new structure was erected somewhat in the shape of a Celtic cross, "the eastern limb being finished with a polygonal apse." Pococke, when making his tour in Ireland in 1752, thus describes it—"The church is the design of Mr. Castels; it is in the form of a cross, with galleries at every end, except the east. The roof is a curious piece of work." A semi-circular arch topped the windows, while the approach to the chancel was under a round arch. "This can now be seen above the ceiling of the present chancel; the old chancel was much shorter than the present one, and was lighted by windows, one in each side of the apse; the whole church was built of stone quite unchiselled, and the roof rested on the walls, as in an ordinary dwelling-house." A second row of galleries was added in 1773 to accommodate the children attending the Charter Schools.

In 1812 the church underwent a regular course of remodeling, at a cost of £5,059 6s. 11d., and was transformed into a Gothic edifice. The old windows were replaced by those which we see at present, and the present chancel was substituted for the old polygonal apse. In 1883 it underwent other alterations which cost about £1,000. "When the present chancel was built, the old vestry was taken in and made part of a new chancel, and a new vestry erected on the south side. A handsome east window, of Gothic design, with a frame-work of cut stone, containing a stained glass window, on which is depicted in handsomely and artistically blended colours a representation of our Lord's Ascension, was at the same time erected, and was the gift of the Ven. Archdeacon Kearney, as a memorial to his mother. The eleven apostles are depicted in the lower side panes, and angels are represented in the upper side panes, and a dove, the emblem of the Holy Spirit, occupies the central top pane. Under this stained glass window is the Communion Table, and in front of the railings is a wide space with choir stalls on each side, and behind these, on the north side, is an organ chamber. The new chancel is approached from the body of the church by a flight of three stone steps."

Another handsome stained glass memorial has been added recently, in 1888, in the west side of the church, to the memory of the late Mrs. L'Estrange, of Kevinsfort. The scriptural subject represents "the rising of Dorcas," the window showing the garments she had made for them. Three other stained-glass memorial windows were erected in 1901 in the nave. One to the memory of the late Harper Campbell, Esq., of The Hermitage; another to the late Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Pollexfen; and the third to the late Mr. and Mrs. C. A. L'Estrange. A caen-stone and marble pulpit, a very fine specimen of the sculptor's art, has been erected by the widow of the late Rector, the Rev. Mr. Dav; and a prayer desk to correspond, which is admitted to be one of the handsomest in Ireland, bears the inscription—"To the glory of God, and in loving memory of Christopher Carleton L'Estrange, and Charlotte Annie L'Estrange, erected by their children, 1890."

The only old monument connected with St. John's is what appears to have been a mural tablet to the memory of Sir Roger Jones. This memorial now stands outside the walls of the church, but as the building has been re-edified several times it is supposed that it was originally placed in the sidewall of the nave.

Colonel Wood-Martin says that the soil of the churchyard presents some peculiarities, and that bodies buried in it do not decay in the ordinary manner; that adipocere in large quantities has been noticed where the ground was opened for fresh interments. This is a soft waxy substance, of a light brown colour, into which the fat and muscular fibre of bodies are converted by burial in soil of peculiar nature. It is also alleged that, by reason of chemicals in the soil, yews will not grow in the churchyard, except in freshly imported earth.

Curate—Rev. J. Cathcart Phair, B.A.

Organist—H. Norman Taylor, A.G.O. (late assistant music master Cheltenham College, and organist Parish Church, Cheltenham).

CALRY CHURCH.

In 1823 this commodious church on the Mall was erected, and is said to be the outcome of some bitterness at a heated parliamentary election between two candidates for the representation of the Borough. The cost was about £3,000, which seems very moderate when compared with all the expensive alterations of St. John's. It is in the Gothic style of architecture, and has a fine tower, surmounted by a well-proportioned spire, crowned with a gilded vane. The site was well chosen, being prettily situated on a height over the river. All the stones for the building were quarried on the spot, which may explain to some extent the smallness of the sum expended on the erection. It was consecrated in 1824, and in the following year the bell was added to its appointments. Calry was constituted in 1871 a distinct parish by the Diocesan Synod, the appointment of incumbent being vested in the Diocesan Board of Patronage, the parish being previously a curacy in the Union of St. John's, the rector of which was the patron.

The interior, which is fitted up in oak, has been recently much improved. In 1885 a beautiful stained glass window was erected, and in 1887, among other improvements and changes in the internal arrangements, a hydraulic engine was erected to substitute manual labour in the working of the organ. The motive power of this engine is derived from the Kilsellagh water supply, a vault for the purpose having been arranged on the ground floor. It should be mentioned that these improvements are mainly due to the exertions of the late Mrs. Wynne, of Hazlewood. Unfortunately this esteemed lady did not live to see the improvements which she inaugurated brought to completion. A very handsome lectern was presented to the church by Miss Wynne when the alterations were being carried out.

Two of the former rectors of Calry now belong to the episcopacy—the Right John Dowden, Bishop of Edinburgh.

Rev. Samuel Shone, Bishop of Kilmore, Elphin, and Ardragh; and the Right Rev.

Incumbent—Rev. Dr. Ardill.

Curate—Rev. C. J. A. Harris, B.A.

Churchwardens—H. Yelverton, J. A. Erskine.

Organist—Mr. Loretto.

THE DOMINICAN ABBEY.

In 1845 the present imposing Church of the Holy Cross in High Street was built from a design of Sir John Benson. It was consecrated on the Feast of the Epiphany in 1848. It seems a pity that the graceful proportions of the church should be hidden away from view by the shops which stand on either side of it. It consists of tower, porch, nave, and chancel, with conventual buildings to the rere. The tower, which is a very imposing one, was not completed until 1852. It is built of Ballysodare limestone, elaborately carved. It stands about feet high, and terminates in eight pinnacles of unequal length, the larger ones being placed at the four corners, and the four smaller ones on the sides. The east doorway in the tower has a low ope, with slender shafts in recesses in the jambs, surmounted by elaborately-cut mouldings in the pointed circle.

Colonel Wood-Martin considers that "the roof nearly resembles, in some of its features, that of Westminster Hall. It consists of a large main arch, with smaller arches, principal rafters, purlins, hammer-beams, curved sheets, and wall-pieces; and inside it has wrought timber sheeting. The wall pieces spring from corbels having angels' heads carved on them."

Holy Cross has been very much improved recently, through the exertions of Father Purcell, and afterwards by Father O'Kelly. A beautiful new gallery has been erected, and, if it cannot boast of large dimensions, it must be admitted that it is the neatest, most artistic, and best of its kind. A new organ has also been added to its appointments, and several other costly improvements have been carried out, so that the church at the present time is one of the finest of the Dominican Convents in Ireland.

Very Rev. T. R. Skelly, prior; Rev. H. J. Donegan, O.P.; Rev. M. A. Hughes, O.P.; Rev. C. H. Keenan, O.P.; Brothers James Mahon, O.P., and Dominick M'Carthy, O.P.

THE HALL.

This structure, situated in the Waste Gardens, and formerly known as the "Union Chapel," and belonging to the Independents, is the meeting-place of the Plymouth Brethren, or Christian Brethren, as they are sometimes called. One of the characteristics of this denomination is that they steadfastly refuse to take part, or vote, in political or municipal elections. They are not a large body, though its members comprise some of the most respectable men in the town.

THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

The first mention of a Presbyterian minister for Sligo is contained in a document in Dublin Castle, in which it is stated that "amongst the allowances granted to ministers there is one of £100 per annum to John Wilkinson, for Sligo, which was then included in the ecclesiastical Precinct of Galway." But the first minister of whom there is any definite knowledge was the Rev. Samuel Henry, who came from the Presbytery of Edinburgh in 1694, and who was ordained in 1695 to the joint charge of Sligo and Ballina.

It was not, however, until 1824 that Sligo became a distinct congregation, when the Rev. James Heron was ordained to the charge. Through the exertions of this minister the present church, in Church Lane, was built in 1828. Mr. Heron having died in 1860 was succeeded by the Rev. Moffatt Jackson, and on his death in 1887, the Rev. F. O. M. Watters, was placed in charge.

Minister—Rev. Wm. Armour, B.A.

Precentor and Organist—Robert Smyllie.

Sexton—R. Ferris.

THE INDEPENDENT CHURCH.

The founder of the Independent Church in Sligo was one Andrew Maiben, a Scotchman and a Presbyterian. About 1780 Maiben, disagreeing with the doctrines preached by the local minister, started to preach on his own account, and, with the assistance of a man named Albert Blest, whom he converted to his views, he managed to draw away a number of seceders from the other churches. Thus was commenced the Independent congregation in Sligo, "though," says Colonel Wood-Martin, "neither of its founders held the views which are generally associated with the name Independent."

In 1791, with funds subscribed in England, was built the "Union Chapel," the building in Waste Gardens at present known as "The Hall." They had a few probationary ministers, but the first regularly appointed to the congregation was the Rev. Cladius Morrison, about 1800.

In 1850 the handsome church, manse, and schools in Stephen Street were built at a cost of £3,000, the money, as before, being chiefly subscribed by friends of the denomination in England.

Minister—Rev. Gordon M'Lachlan.

THE METHODIST CHURCH.

In 1758, Wesley, the founder of Methodism, visited Sligo. It would appear that some sympathisers had already located themselves in Sligo, for he found the way partially prepared for him, and the prospect generally rather encouraging. He then arranged that Sligo should share occasionally in the ministrations of the clergyman in charge of Castlebar. Wesley again visited the town in 1760, and found that considerable progress had been made.

The first chapel was an unpretentious affair, and was erected in 1795 in Bridge Street. "It was small, and had an exceedingly low thatched roof." At this period Sligo, owing to its central position, "became the head of a circuit" and had two ministers, and also received a good deal of attention from the founder, so much that in 1799 he had paid no fewer than fourteen visits to the district. A more pretentious building was erected in Linenhall Street in 1802, but the present place of worship is the neat little church in Wine Street, which was opened in June, 1832.

Minister—Rev. James Grubb.

Curate—Rev. Alex. Cairns.

Sexton—R. Johnston.

SLIGO UNITED Y.M.C.A.—This Association was started as far back as the year 1867, and during the thirty-eight years of its existence it has gone through many changes. During the past four years it seems to have taken a new lease of life, as each succeeding year seems to make its predecessor sink into insignificance, and the finances are in a very healthy condition. The object of the Society is for the promotion of the moral, physical, and intellectual improvement of young men. Meetings are held every Tuesday evenings from October to April, the subjects being debates, essays, papers, concerts, at homes, and an amateur parliament. In connection with the Association there has been started a very fine brass and reed band, an orchestra, French, Latin, and singing classes, etc. By this it will be seen what a boon it is to the young men of Sligo. Rooms, Protestant Hall, Stephen Street, Sligo. Presidents—Sir Josslyn Gore-Booth, Bart.; Sir Malby Crofton, Bart.; Colonel W. G. Wood-Martin, A.D.C.; Owen Wynne, Esq., D.L.; R. A. SLIGO BOATING AND ROWING CLUB.—This Club, which was started in May, 1900, has been growing in favour with the young men of our town ever since its inception. The progress which the Club has made is doubtless due to the advantages and benefits which may be derived from membership. The members meet every Monday and Thursday evenings at the Riverside, and an enjoyable spin is indulged in on beautiful Lough Gill. Then there are scratch races confined to members every June, and for the past four years the committee have run a Regatta on the August Bank Holiday. Looking back on the Regatta of 1902, and comparing it with the recent fixture, one can see the strides which the committee have made in this direction. Officers for 1905: President, Rev. Canon J. R. Ardill, LL.D.; Vice-Presidents—Mr. Joseph Graham, jun., J.P.; Mr. Thomas Stephenson, Mr. William Hamilton; Captain, Thomas Fairbanks; Vice-Captain, Frank Kilroe; Committee—J. Kelly, G. Johnston, T. THE FORESTERS.—Branch Lily of Lough Gill (No. 376), Irish National Foresters' Benefit Society, was formed in the latter part of the year 1899. The founders of the branch (if one would so speak) were Bros. Thomas Higgins, Enniskillen, and James Mullen, who were ably assisted by Bros. Thomas J. Begley, Thos. M'Carrick, T.C.; John, T.C., and Robert Kerins (deceased). Bro. T. Higgins occupied the position of Chief Ranger of the Branch for the first year, but owing to his calling, which compelled him to be out of town for considerable periods, the onus of presiding officer fell on the then Sub-Chief Ranger (Bro. John Finan), who filled the position with credit to himself and the Branch generally. Bro. T. J. Begley held the very important position of secretary for three years, and, needless to say, that such an affable, courteous, and popular young gentleman gave entire satisfaction to the members of our local Branch of Foresters. The Branch at present is in a most flourishing condition, having bought out its present premises (which are freehold) in High Street. At the end of the year (1905) the members of the Branch will be the owners of two of the most up-to-date and best equipped billiard-rooms in the Province of Connaught, or from this to Dublin. Since its formation the Branch has paid out hundreds of pounds in medical officers' fees, sick ailments, distress grants, and funeral payments. The present Officers of the Branch are Chief Ranger, Bro. Thomas J. Begley; Sub-Chief Ranger, Bro. P. Harte, High Street; Trustees, Bros. M. O'Keane, Edward Verdon, Patrick Kelly; Woodward, J. Healey and J. Scanlon; Beadles, A. Manghan and Tom Brown; Branch Secretary, James Healy.

ANCIENT ORDER OF HIBERNIANS (Sligo Division No. 23).—Meets every alternate Sunday at 5 p.m. at Trades Hall, Market Street. Officers:—President, Edward Connolly, T.C., Albert Street; Vice-President, Michael Keaveney, Church Hill; Trustees, James Kivlehan, Wolfe Tone Street; Henry Reilly, T.C., John Street (the latter is a member of the National Directory); Treasurer, Michael Burke, Church Hill; Recording Secretary, Edward M'Fadden, John Street; Financial Secretary, Francis Gallagher, Harmony Hill (to whom all communications should be addressed).

THE COUNTY SLIGO GOLF CLUB.—President, Lieut.-Col. Campbell; Vice-Presidents, Sir Josslyn Gore-Booth, Bart.; Owen Wynne, Esq., D.L. Office-bearers—Captain, Arthur Jackson; Council—W. R. Fenton, Geo. Hewson, E. St. G. Robinson, R. P. Chambers, Col. Coffey, H. G. L'Estrange, Henry Lyons, Dr. MacDowell, Dr. Martyn. A. Maver, J. M'Carthy, J. C. Quin, W. H. Robinson, W. T. Vernon; Hon. Secretary and Treasurer, H. Campbell Perry, Sligo; Assistant Hon. Secretary, H. Cecil Lyons.

GAELIC ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.—The G.A.A. was established to foster and encourage the playing of National games and pastimes in this country, the principal of which are hurling, football, handball, running, jumping, weight-throwing, etc. The Association is governed by a Central Council, the members of which are annually elected by bona-fide clubs in each county. It has power to make new and amend the existing laws at the annual convention or Gaelic congress, which is held at Thurles in August of each year. The Central Council has charge of the All-Ireland Hurling and Football Championships, together with the granting of permits to athletic sports' meetings held under its rules. In addition to the Central Council, each province has its Provincial Council, made up of members from affiliated counties with it. The Provincial Council has charge of the affairs of the Association within the province, and if its decisions be questioned by any of the respective counties it is only on appeal that matters may be referred to the Central Council. County Boards are formed in each affiliated county, and their duty is to take charge of the affairs of the Association in the county, just as the Provincial Council take charge in the province or the Central Council for the whole of Ireland. County Boards consist of representatives from affiliated clubs in the county elected annually at a convention within the county. All matters in connection with the working of the Association, it will be seen, are first started at the individual club, then referred to the County Board, and, if not settled, sent on appeal to the Provincial Council, which in turn can be appealed from to the Central Council. It will be seen from the above that the Association is worked on the most democratic lines possible, and therefore it is little to be wondered at that it is the most popular of all sport-governing bodies. In proof of this it only remains to be seen that the Gaels of London have their County Board, which is under the supremacy of the Central Council, just as any of the provinces within the shores of Ireland. The greater Ireland beyond the seas has lately adopted Gaelic sports and pastimes, and lately it may be seen that the County Championships are in full swing in the land of the Stars and Stripes. The New York County Board is already affiliated to the Central Council, and it is expected will send its representatives to the next Gaelic congress.

The following constitute the present Sligo County Board:—T. D. Howley, Chairman (Sligo); F. M. Valley, Treasurer (Sligo); P. J. M'Hale, Hon. Sec. (Sligo); W. Flannelly, Dromard; B. Clarke, Dromard; M. H. O'Dowd, Bunninadden; D. Fleming, Sligo; Owen Heally, Sligo; M. J. M'Manus, Tubbercurry; M. M'Caffrey, Tubbercurry; Thomas Curley, Riverstown; D. Kerins, Grange; P. Kilfeather, Knocknarea; B. Heally, Ballymote; J. Gunning, Ballymote.

SLIGO BRANCH GAELIC LEAGUE.—This Branch was founded by the Most Rev. Dr. Clancy more than seven years ago. His Lordship invited the Very Rev. M. P. O'Hickey, D.D., Professor of Irish, Maynooth College, to explain the aims of the Gaelic League to the citizens of Sligo. The outcome of the lecture was the starting of this Branch. Since it was founded it has succeeded in getting the Irish language taught in the Catholic schools, primary and secondary, of the town and of the adjoining district. It is to be regretted that it has not yet been able to get the National language introduced into the schools of the other denominations. It has two classes for adults taught in the Town Hall, one for advanced, taught by the Rev. J. O'Kelly, B.D., Summerhill College; and the other for beginners by Miss O'Rourke, N.T. It cannot be said that the attendance at these classes, particularly by boys, is satisfactory. It has been mainly instrumental in founding the Feis Shligigh. This Feis has been held for the last three years, and was on every occasion an unqualified success. The Branch has also held Sgornidheacha, Aeridheacha, and many public meetings.

ST. BRIGID'S CLUB.—This Club was opened in October, 1901. It was founded by the Most Rev. Dr. Clancy for the purpose of providing innocent recreation and solid instruction for the members of the Women's Total Abstinence League. The Club consists of a reading-room, where suitable papers and periodicals are read by the members; a work-room, where the members sew for themselves and for the poor; a games'-room, and a music-room, besides apartments for the lady superintendent. Several classes have been conducted, viz.—singing, Irish dancing, crochet, sewing, cookery, and Irish language. The Club has at present three hundred members. The members of the Committee are the heads of the Guild of the Women's Total Abstinence League. The member's subscription is one penny per week. The good work done by the Club has certainly justified its foundation.

SCHOOLS.

DIOCESAN SCHOOL, The Mall.—This school, which has been described in 1787 as "three stories high, spacious, and well built, and situated within a quarter of a mile of the town," dates back to 1571. It was formerly one of the Charter Schools, for which Parliament voted large sums of money to establish and maintain. On the breaking up of the Charter Schools, the Sligo house came into the ownership of the Wynne family, and is now the premises of the Elphin Diocesan School, being transferred to Sligo by warrant dated 5th November, 1862. Head Master, W. C. Eades, M.A., Ex. Sch. and Sen. Cl. Mod. T.C.D.; Assistant Master (English, Math., and Science), W. Rea, William Street.

PRIMROSE GRANGE SCHOOL.—This is also a school of Secondary education, and belongs to the Incorporated Society for Promoting English Protestant Schools in Ireland. This Society enjoys munificent grants, and it would appear that the Primrose Grange establishment has also, in addition, £120 a year, bequeathed by a Mr. Nicholson "for a school at Knocknarea," the school itself standing on the Nicholson estate. There are two classes of boarders—hall boarders and parlour boarders, "the terms for the former being 30 guineas per annum with extras," and for the latter 30 guineas with extras. In addition to boys from the various centres throughout the County, many pupils come from Dublin and other distant places. Head Master, R. Bailie; Assistant, H. Jones.

MODEL SCHOOL.—Male, Principal, T. Hill, B.A.; Assistant, H. T. Tweedie; Female, Principal, Miss R. Munce; Assistant, Miss I. Massey; Infants' School, Principal, Miss G. Lord; Assistant, Miss A. Lord.

MILITARY BARRACKS.

These buildings are situated in Barrack Street, on an eminence overlooking the town and harbour, and some years ago detachments of military have been regularly stationed here. The place is now the headquarters of the Duke of Connaught's Own Sligo Artillery. From the commencement of the Revolution of 1688 until 1691 there could be no local body of militia stationed within the county. A local force for Sligo has existed since 1715. During the spring of 1798 the Sligo Militia, then designated the 22nd Light Infantry, were quartered in the South of Ireland, but were disbanded in 1814 at the conclusion of the European War. The first mention that can be found of change of designation of the Sligo Regiment is in 1843, where (under the heading of disembodied militia) it is described as the 124th instead of the 22nd Light Infantry. In 1854 Colonel Francis Arthur Knox Gore, Lieutenant of the County Sligo and Colonel of the Sligo Militia, having received instructions to enrol volunteers for the Sligo Militia, the first volunteer was enrolled on the 16th November, 1854. On the 8th February, 1855, the regiment was embodied, and it then appeared as a Rifle Corps, and was shortly after moved to Longford. The regiment was disbanded at Sligo on the 25th August, 1856. On the 1st April, 1877, the Regiment was converted from rifles to artillery, and designated the 8th Brigade (Duke of Connaught's Own) North Irish Division Royal Artillery, and subsequently in 1891 Duke of Connaught's Own Sligo Artillery Southern Division Royal Artillery, and again in 1902 Duke of Connaught's Own Sligo Royal Garrison Artillery (Militia). The unit was last embodied from 10th May to 16th October, 1900 (154 days). Colonel Wood-Martin, who commanded the regiment from 1883 to 1902, on the occasion of her late Majesty Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee, was honoured by being made a personal A.D.C. to Her Majesty.

The Officers at present serving are:—Lieutenant-Colonel J. J. A. Roberts, Commanding; Major L. C. F. Wynne; Captains G. H. Heather, H. H. W. Saunders Knox-Gore, J. Bramley Moore, Instructor in Gunnery; Lieutenants E. J. E. Boys and T. H. Beckley; Captain H. H. W. Saunders Knox-Gore, Acting Adjutant; Sergeant-Major (W. O.) R. Macpherson, Q.M.-Sergeant C. J. Wood, Q.M.-Sergeant (Artillery Clerk) W. Ferguson, Orderly-room Clerk; Bandmaster, E. Newman. Staff—Sergeants W. Gardner, E. Newman, J. Adams, H. Godwin, T. Hunt, G. Lomas, E. Willcombe, J. Stockwell, A. Fitzgerald; Trumpeters H. Godwin, W. Beattie, H. Cowell, J. Reynolds.

THE POLICE BARRACKS.

There are two Police Barracks in the town—one in Albert Street, accommodating 28 men, erected in 1847; and the other in Wine Street, erected in 1880, and accommodating 18 men. A new building has recently been built on the Albert Road, in which the County Inspector has his offices, but the principal idea in the erection was to provide suitable recreation rooms for the men.

It would appear that it took far fewer men to maintain law and order when the people were less enlightened than they are now. At the beginning of the century, before the formation of this quasi-military force in 1823, the duty was performed, in each barony, by a chief constable and 8 sub-constables, thus making the total county force (Corran and Coolavin formed one district) only 45 men. Now there are—a county inspector, 4 district inspectors, 5 head constables, and over 229 sergeants and constables.

County Inspector—H. G. W. Yeates.

District Inspector—E. F. Otter.

Head Constable—John Daly.

No. 1. Albert Street Station — Sergeants Patrick M'Hugh, J. Connell, T. O'Grady, J. Feely, J. Maginn, M. Dolan; Constables P. Barton, B. Brady, E. Butler, M. Crotty, M. Crowley, M. Duffy, J. Fitzpatrick, W. Flanagan, J. Grey, J. Kane, C. Magauran, J. H. M'Elhinney, W. Moore, J. Rooney, P. Shanley, J. W. Sharpe, and E. Sweeney.

No. 2. Wine Street Station—Sergeants P. Dolan, J. Toohey; Constables P. Caslin, T. Dolan, P. Flynn, T. Gilhooly, P. Heenan, P. Hanlon, J. Mullan, and Patrick M'Dermott.

SLIGO HARBOUR.

Twenty-five years ago and now.

THE prosperity of the Town of Sligo is so inseparably bound up with the success of its Harbour, that I think any Almanac published in Sligo would be incomplete without some notice, however small, of the progress and improvements made in the latter during the past quarter of a century.

Statistics are necessarily dry and not always convincing so I do not propose to inflict any upon my readers, but simply by way of a quiet chat, point out the changes which have taken place on and about our Quays under my own observation.

In the days when Captain Barrett was a familiar figure and Captain Keebles still sailed the "Liverpool," Sligo Quays presented a widely different appearance to what they do to-day. What is now known as the Old Quay, was then called by such names as Martin's Quay, Cochrane's Quay, Ballast Quay &c, while no stone of the splendid pier terminating at the deep-water berths, had yet been set. These names—giving a clue to the merchant princes of a former generation—have generally passed into oblivion, and, save in the mouths of a few hardy fishermen who have outlived their compeers, and in the Harbour archives, are forgotten altogether.

The Quays were divided into two parts by Lynn's Dock which lay to the North-West back of the Bonded Stores, this Dock, which was of some use when traffic was principally in the hands of coasting schooners, ceased to be of value with the advent of the steam collier. It has been filled in for many years past, and the place is now partly laid down in concrete beds for the accommodation of coal merchants. A humble coffee stand has lately been placed near by, through the kindness of some local philanthropists, for the benefit of Quaymen and others who may prefer tea or coffee to the more alluring beverages of Guinness and Jameson.

Messrs M'Neill & Sons' Bobbin Mills then occupied the ground at the South End of the Dock, and gave employment to many hundreds of skilled and unskilled workmen. Unfortunately these mills have long since disappeared and what was at one period a veritable hive of industry has ceased to exist.

The large field lying before Lyons's Terrace, which is now used as a pen for livestock awaiting shipment, was then an unwallled common, generally littered with timber belonging to the Messrs M'Neill, a large space along the railway bank being occupied by a pool of water, which, when frozen in Winter, was the fashionable resort for skaters about Sligo.

Shed accommodation was very limited, only two small sheds being provided. The double shed at the lower end of the Old Quay was used by both Liverpool and Glasgow Steamers, they not having separate berthing and sheds as at present. I have a sorrowful recollection of the many heart-rending scenes at these same sheds, when, in the eighties, a continuous stream of Emigrants flowed weekly to America via the Liverpool Steamer. But this is a digression. To return to a comparison of shed accommodation: We have now on the old Quay three large commodious sheds, which are mostly filled to overflowing with breadstuffs and other stuffs from the markets of the world.

Flour and grain carrying was then in the hands of the sailer, and barques of 700 to 1000 tons might occasionally be seen discharging. Now our grain arrives in steamers, some of them carrying up to 4,500 tons. These steamers come right to the deep-water berths almost without being lightened, and are discharged sometimes in little over a week.

Coal carrying has also changed hands. I well recollect seeing the Quays three deep with small craft 80 to 150 tons awaiting their turn for discharging berth, but now-a-days all coal is carried by steamers 400 to 600 tons cargo, and these are discharged in 15 to 20 working hours, and often come and go unnoticed, leaving however the shining heaps of "black diamonds" a substantial evidence of their visits.

In the way of regular steamer service we are accommodated by two Steamship Companies, one a local company—Sligo Steam Navigation Company—which holds the carrying trade between Sligo and Liverpool, the other Messrs Laird of Glasgow who link up Westport and Ballina with Sligo and Glasgow. These companies have weekly and bi-weekly service. In addition there is a service to Belmullet and Mayo coast towns by the "Tartar." This steamer sails bi-weekly in winter and tri-weekly in summer and is subsidized by the Board of Works. The service was intended for the benefit of the Congested Districts of Mayo, and it is said to be of value to the Sligo merchants.

Railway accommodation has also vastly increased and improved. In the old days the Midland was in undisputed possession; but now there are two additional, the Sligo Leitrim and Northern Counties, which links us to Enniskillen and the North of Ireland, and the Great Southern and Western which opens up a new path through Sligo and Mayo to Roscommon, Galway and the South. To make provision for the increased traffic the Railway bank and Goods Store accommodation has been doubled of late years.

The New Quay extends for about half a mile along the south bank of the river, and the berthing accommodation, which is at lower end, is about 600 feet. A line of rails now extends to the berths, and grain or flour is discharged direct into the waggons for up-country millers and buyers. Two large sheds serve for storage.

The management of the Harbour is vested in Commissioners who are all level-headed, capable men, and as they have followed a policy of progress, so far as their means permitted, the result has been a success. Anyone aware of the difficulties which have had to be surmounted in trying to make and keep Sligo Harbour abreast of the times, must admit that the Commissioners have had a clear perception of their duty, and have done it. Vast sums, obtained on loan, have been spent in deepening the berths and four miles of river stretch from Sligo to Rosses Point, the sandy nature of the estuary making dredging a constant necessity. Some years ago a powerful hopper dredger was bought, and is kept constantly at work during the summer months. An attempt to remove the "Blennick"—a bank of boulders and shingle which reaches towards the south between the coast guard station and Rosses Point—has so far been unsuccessful, and a quarry bank at the Quays named "Pool Cawm" has also resisted all efforts at removal. In spite of these failures, the Commissioners seem determined to go ahead and have lately appointed a new Harbour Engineer to succeed Mr Lalor, the former painstaking official. The tendency of shipping the world over is in the direction of increased size, and harbours must improve and keep their accommodation up-to-date if merchants are to successfully compete against all comers. It is quite clear that Sligo men recognise their responsibility, and their efforts to keep pace with the times deserve success. A new tug has lately been bought.

I must not forget to mention that an oil pump is installed at the Glasgow steamer shed, and often tank steamers may be seen delivering the petroleum to the Anglo-American Company's tanks on Finisklin Road.

The harbour watchmen, who in the old days were generally pensioners, have been almost entirely replaced by an efficient force uniformed and modelled on the style of the Royal Irish Constabulary and who are now a regularly bound police.

Representatives of some of the merchant princes of half a century ago still carry on large business, and one Firm is having a new Mill built on the deep water berth embankment.

CO. COUNCIL PRINTING CONTRACT.

ACCEPTING A HIGHER TENDER

The Sligo County printing contract led to an extraordinary scene at the Sligo Co. Council yesterday.

The following tenders were received in reference to the contract, which is a three-yearly one—

Sligo Houses.

A. Gilmour .....	£1,332
Mrs. P. A. M'Hugh .....	£1,179
Mr. Kilgallon .....	£750

Dublin Houses.

Six tenders from leading printing firms. None of them opened.

The Chairman (Mr. O'Dowd, M.P.) announced that the Council would not consider any tender from any firm outside the county, and refused to read the Dublin tenders.

Mr. Condon pointed out that Mr. Kilgallon's tender was the lowest, and it should be accepted, as they could not afford to lose that amount of money on the ratepayers. He asked was Mr. Kilgallon thoroughly competent to do the work.

EXTRAORDINARY SCENE.

Mr. Kilgallon came forward with the £1 deposit necessary to be made on the tender.

Mr. Peter Cowley, Co.C., thereupon got up excitedly, flung the money on the floor, rushed over to Mr. Kilgallon, and caught a hold of him by the shoulder, threatening that if he opened his mouth while they were giving the contract to Mrs. M'Hugh he would fling him down the stairs.

Mr. P. A. M'Hugh got up and addressed the Council, declaring, in the course of his speech, that they all knew how he had suffered on behalf of the National cause. He had to face imprisonment and also bankruptcy (applause).

He asked was the Council going to deny him this work. Owing to the attitude of landlordism and coercionists he had been compelled to carry on business in his wife's name, and his wife was present (applause).

Mr. O'Dowd, M.P. (chairman) said it would be an extraordinary thing to pass over a patriot like Mr. P. A. M'Hugh and give the work to another man.

It was then decided to give the contract at £1,179 for three years to Mrs. M'Hugh.

The announcement was received with

This report is taken from the official Daily Independent of 29th August last, & is perfectly correct except in one or two minor details. For a period of 20 years I was contractor (off & on) to the Grand Jury for similar work, & always got fair play - the lowest tender being accepted in every instance. But since the County Council came into power!!! I shall not add a word of comment at the & volume could be written on the subject. - J. Kilgallon.
